Germans Claim 'Flaming Seas' Raid Upon Moscow

Fair Peace Is Given as U.S. Desire

Sumner Welles Offers Most Definite Report on Post-War Aims of Nation

Wedge Is Object

Breach Would Be Put Between Hitler and German People

Washington, July 23 (AP)—A declaration by Sumner Welles, designed to assure all peoples of a fair peace and equal economic opportunities, gave the nation and the world today the most definite official statement yet made of the American government's post-war objectives.

In the capital the impression prevailed, moreover, that the declaration was directed even more at Nazi-conquered Europe than at this country and the general belief was that in this respect it constituted an attempt to stimulate popular resistance to German rule and drive a wedge between Adolf Hitler and the German people.

The American post-war aims were stated by Welles, acting secretary of state, last night in a speech at the laying of a cornerstone for a new wing of the Norwegian legation. But what he had to say about the future—he prefaced with the grim assertion that "there can be no peace until the Hitler government of Germany has been finally and utterly destroyed."

Welles' immediate audience at the ceremonies included the Norwegian minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstjerne, representative of the exiled government of King Haakon VII, now in London; Crown Princess Martha of Norway; the Russian ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, other diplomats, members of Congress and defense officials.

Morgenstjerne said the construction of the new wing evidenced the expansion of the legation staff here from eight persons at the time of the German invasion of Norway in April, 1940, to 40 at present.

"We hoped that the very fact of our expanding at this time, when Norway is being temporarily occupied and raped by foreign masters," he said, "might symbolize to you, to the world, yes, to the aggressors themselves, that we defy them, that we are building for the future, that we have abundant faith in victory and freedom."

Norwegian Funds Believed Used
The construction presumably was financed from Norwegian funds frozen in this country by presidential order but in the case of the funds of other Nazi-occupied countries, made available to the diplomats of exiled governments to defray their expenses here and elsewhere in the western hemisphere.

London reported that extracts from Welles' speech were quoted in British broadcasts to the European continent, in about 25 different languages.

Welles said the ideal for which "peoples of good will" should work to attain a permanent peace was the creation after the war of an association of nations powerful enough to guarantee disarmament and equal economic opportunities.

Referring to the League of Nations projected by President Wilson at the close of the World War, the acting secretary said he did not believe that peoples of good will "will not once more strive to realize the great ideal of an association of nations through which the freedom, the happiness and the security of all peoples may be achieved."

He said that the League of Nations had failed to establish lasting peace "in part because of the blind selfishness of men here in the United States as well as in other parts of the world." United States membership was blocked by the Senate in 1920.

The failure must also be attributed, Welles said, to the fact that the league was forced by those who controlled it to operate "as a means of maintaining the status quo."

It was never able to function as President Wilson had intended it, he said, "as an elastic and impartial instrument in bringing about peaceful and equitable adjustments between nations as times and circumstances proved necessary."

Yet, he declared, such adjustments were necessary.

List Is Received Numbers Being Given

Kingston's Selective Service Board has received the master list of numbers as drawn recently from the goldfish bowl in Washington, and are now at work assigning the order numbers to the 136 men who registered in the second peacetime draft.

These 136 men have all reached the age of 21 years since the first draft last October. The new men will be integrated with the original list of remaining undrafted men from the first draft. At the office of the local draft board it was said that this would take some time.

Man Confesses He Slewed John Ballo at Tucker's Corners

Wife, Charging Threat, Tells California Police Husband Murdered Man in 1922

The arrest of John Lobua, 45, at Sacramento, Cal., Sunday on a charge of assault lodged by his wife has resulted in the location of a man wanted since 1922 in Ulster county for the murder of John Ballo, who was shot to death with a shot-gun on November 10, 1922 at Tucker's Corners. Lobua was arrested by Sacramento police Sunday on complaint of his wife who charged he had threatened her with a knife. Monday after the arrest the wife became frightened as to the consequences which might come as a result of the complaint and went to Chief of Police Alec K. MacAllister and told him that Lobua, whose true name is Salvatore Tripiario, was wanted in Ulster county for murder.

Sheriff Abram F. Molyneux was queried as to the truth of this charge made by Tripiario's wife, and ascertained the truth of the charge. Tripiario, alias John Lobua, has admitted the shooting to the California police and agreed to extradition.

When Tripiario's wife informed the California police of the Tucker's Corners murder, they questioned Tripiario but he at first denied the fact but later told the chief of police that the charge made by his wife was true.

Tripiario then told the police that he had owned a small farm about nine miles out of Highland in Ulster county and that his sister and her husband had occupied the adjoining farm. With them lived a man, Joseph Ballo who had "made love to his sister" and Tripiario reported that fact to her husband.

Tripiario, alias Lobua, said when Ballo learned of the report from him to the husband he sent for Tripiario and an argument ensued. Tripiario said Ballo tried to hit him on the head with a hammer and that he went home.

Four Girls Share In Copper Fortune

Guggenheim Cuts Out Wife and Son; Two Chorus Girls Are Listed

New York, July 23 (AP)—A former "Miss America," a former "Miss Connecticut" and two other young women are named to share the estate of William Guggenheim, of the famous copper family, in a will that made no provisions for Guggenheim's widow and son.

Disposing of an estate estimated at more than $1,000,000, the will's provisions were disclosed yesterday by the law firm of Griffiths and Content, which announced it soon would offer the document for probate. Guggenheim, who died last month at 72, was one of the seven sons of Meyer Guggenheim, founder of the family fortune.

Attorney Abraham L. Biensstock, counsel for Mrs. Aimee Steinberger Guggenheim, the widow, said he had been given a copy of the will, which said she and her son, William, had been provided for adequately during Guggenheim's lifetime.

Named as "share and share alike" beneficiaries of an estate that includes a palatial Riverside Drive mansion were Lillian Andrus, described as "Miss America of 1929," a showgirl and now a resident of Hollywood; Mary Alice

Soviet Sources Call Second Attack on Capital Failure

Hitler's Headquarters Say Red Armies Are Falling Back Along Entire Battle Line With Losses

(By The Associated Press)
German bombers left scores killed and wounded in Moscow today and reported that "vast flaming seas" engulfed the Soviet capital, while on the fighting front Adolf Hitler's high command declared Russian troops were suffering "extraordinarily sanguinary losses" everywhere.

It was Moscow's second successive night raid. The Russians, while admitting casualties, fires and bomb-wrecked homes, declared the Moscow assault was a failure. They also insisted that Soviet troops were still fighting in the same zones as yesterday.

Attacks on F. D. R. Elbow War From Nazi Front Pages

President Is Charged With Influencing Bolivians Against Germany; Remarks 'Lies'

Berlin, July 23 (AP)—Attacks on President Roosevelt pushed the German war off the front pages of the entire Berlin morning press today.

Although the Luftwaffe in the past 24 hours carried modern technical warfare to Moscow, which had not heard the din of battle with a foreign foe since 1812, editors gave the whole of their front pages to a rejuvenated anti-Roosevelt campaign.

The President was charged with intriguing against Germany in Bolivia. DNB, the official German news agency, said he was trying to bring Bolivia into the status of "colonial dependence" on the United States.

Also under attack was his message to Congress, and the press branded as lies his remarks concerning German threats to the United States.

Without exception, morning newspapers also published on their front pages a picture of President Roosevelt with his sons, James, Franklin and Elliott, at a Masonic lodge session.

According to the Nazi tenets, being a Mason is almost a cardinal sin and the picture is supposed to be particularly damning evidence, as the Voelkischer Beobachter said in a two-line banner headline, that "Roosevelt is the main tool of Jewish world Freemasonry."

(Freemasonry in parts of continental Europe years ago developed activities, including interference with politics, which led many governments to declare it a danger to the state and to suppress it within their jurisdictions. Freemasonry in the United States, as well as the "Mother Grand Lodge" of England and Anglo-Saxon lodges generally, has no connection with such Freemasonry. Among the fundamentals of the United States grand lodges, for instance, are non-sectarianism in religion and the forbidding of political activity.)

The picture was reported found in Masonic headquarters in German-occupied Oslo, Norway. It was described as taken November 7, 1935, and as depicting President Roosevelt at the initiation of his sons, James and Franklin.

Cigarette Tax Computed

Albany, N. Y., July 23 (AP)—New York state received $23,800,000 from its two-cents-a-pack cigarette tax in 1940-41, more than $2,000,000 over the previous year's total. The revenue exceeded Governor Lehman's estimate by $800,000.

Raids on Moscow Aim to Demoralize Russian Population

Russo War May Mean Nazi Leader Is Inspired by Both Desperation and Great Confidence

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Freeman Special News Service)

The dead who lie within their bomb-shattered homes in Moscow have paid the inevitable price for the delays which their Red army's resistance continues to impose on Herr Hitler's schedule of invasion.

The grim strategy of trying to smash civilian morale has been inviolable again to support the Nazi action on the fighting front. There are three elements of morale essential to the security of any nation—civilian, governmental, military. The collapse of any one of these may mean defeat.

The Muscovites report that the capital's four millions have taken in stride the heavy raids of the last two nights. Meantime the German war machine continues to drive forward persistently, but at greatly reduced speed.

The further the Russo-German conflict develops, disclosing the potentialities of this war of giants, the more it's given to wonder at Hitler's extreme daring in challenging the unknown striking-power of the communist commonwealth. He must have been inspired either by unlimited confidence or desperation—quite likely by both.

It's Not on Schedule
The Nazi invasion has achieved great military feats, but that the operation isn't proceeding on schedule is increasingly evident. Speed must be the essence of success, and the astonishing resistance of the Bolsheviks already has delayed the German advance beyond the point of safety for the invaders.

The few weeks remaining before bad weather signals the approach of the fierce Muscovite winter is little time for the conquest of all the Russians. Hitler must perform a

Hoover Sends Message On Death of Elting

Marshall Calls Petition Sabotage

Says U. S. Can't Have Any Political Club and Call It an Army

Washington, July 23 (AP)—General George C. Marshall denounced today as sabotage of a dangerous character what he said were organized efforts to have drafted petition Congress against extending the service of selectees and national guardsmen.

The chief of staff, testifying before the House military committee in behalf of an extension, asserted there had been an organized effort by "countless outside forces" to have members of the First Army sign petitions against the proposal.

Word of the activity, Marshall said, came from Lieutenant General Hugh Drum, commander of the First Army.

"We cannot have a political club and call it an army," Marshall said forcefully, adding that the situation could not be ignored and that the men involved would have to be treated "as soldiers."

He did not amplify the statement.

Is Not 'Stymied'
At the outset of his remarks, Marshall told the committee he was now "stymied" on the question of re-enforcing the army's small garrison at Trinidad by the one-year limitation on the service of draftees and guardsmen.

Although he said he had been pressed for approval of plans to send additional troops to Trinidad, one of the southernmost of the new bases obtained from Britain, he had refused because of the legislative restrictions of the service of selectees and guardsmen.

A provision to excuse certain classes of national guardsmen and reserves from further army service was proposed today by Senator

Funeral Rites Are Held This Afternoon for Ulster Republican Chieftain

Funeral services for Philip Elting, former collector of the Port of New York, and Republican leader and Ulster county chairman since 1904, were to be held from the late residence, 106 Maiden Lane at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Messages of condolence and sympathy continued to pour in today to the family and to others, indicating the high esteem in which Mr. Elting was held.

Among the many telegrams and messages of condolence and sympathy for the services which Mr. Elting had rendered the county, state and nation were those received from ex-President Herbert Hoover, State Chairman Edward F. City Board Drops Rabies Proposal

Enforced Vaccination of Dogs Not Held Effective by State Board

Although the state health department would not lodge any objection to the city's health board adopting regulations requiring compulsory vaccination of dogs against rabies, it does not consider inoculation of dogs against rabies as sufficiently effective so that the state department would make it mandatory in the state.

That was the gist of a communication received by Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, from Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, district state health officer, which was read at the monthly meeting of the Board of Health Tuesday evening.

After hearing the communication read the board decided to drop further consideration of the plan to enforce compulsory inoculation of dogs in Kingston.

Dr. Ingraham in his communication wrote: "You will recall that a conference was held with Dr. James Perkins, director of the division of communicable diseases of the state department of health, regarding a telegram received from the Kingston Board of Health."

"At this conference Dr. Perkins stated that it was his opinion your

Censorship Is Taken as Indication

Sumner Welles Will Meet Ambassador and May Serve U. S. Warning

Steps Are Cited

U. S. May Act Under Neutrality Act, May Cut Exports

Washington, July 23 (AP)—Secretary of Navy Frank Knox today said there was "no question" but that recent developments in the Far East, including the Japanese government's establishment of radio and cable censorship on information from that country, meant new military movements in the Far East.

(The Japanese embassy said today it had received a report, which lacked official confirmation, that Japan and the French Vichy government had reached an agreement on Indo-China.

(An official of the embassy declined to give the origin of the report.)

Knox told his press conference: "I look for movement out there—and very soon."

He declined, however, to discuss the possible direction of such a move, saying that "no one can tell at this point whether it will go north or south."

The navy department yesterday informed President Roosevelt that the Japanese had established censorship and at his press conference President Roosevelt said he considered it significant, but referred questions to the state department when asked if he expected it to be the prelude to an aggressive action in the Orient.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, arranged today to receive the Japanese ambassador, at 3 p. m., E. S. T. It was not disclosed whether Welles or the ambassador requested a meeting but all indications were that the envoy would be told plainly that American-Japanese relations would suffer a further strain from any military move into French Indo-China or elsewhere.

Infrequent Caller

The Japanese ambassador, Kichisa Buro Nomura, is an infrequent caller at the state department and his visit today was linked with widespread reports of Japanese preparations for some military stroke.

Welles was expected to ask Admiral Nomura to clarify Japanese intentions, making it clear at the same time that the United States was vitally interested in maintenance of the peace in the Pacific.

Some Far Eastern experts expressed the view today that underlying Japan's reported new demands on Indo-China was a Tokyo determination to place Japanese forces in easy striking distance of the rich Dutch East Indies and Britain's strategic Singapore naval base.

These authorities, declining to be quoted by name, said the demands undoubtedly called for virtual Japanese domination of France's Far Eastern possession. Should Vichy fail to capitulate quickly, they added, the Japanese could be expected to open an immediate offensive against Indo-China in anticipation of a speed conquest.

Press dispatches from Vichy were confined to a bare statement that the French and Japanese governments were negotiating in regard to Indo-China. In London authorized sources said reports of the demands were disturbing to the British in view of Japanese assurances a month ago that Japan had no territorial demands in Indo-China.

American officials were watching the situation intently. President Roosevelt took occasion at this press conference yesterday to disclose a navy report that Tokyo had imposed a censorship on both radio and cable. He answered affirmatively when asked whether he considered this action significant.

Possible Steps

What steps the government contemplated in view of developments, however, were not disclosed. Several possibilities were believed to be under consideration. These, well-informed persons believed, included:

Action under the neutrality act, to forbid American ships and citizens from venturing into any new combat zone delineated by the President.

Extension of export control restrictions which would stop shipments of oil-vitality necessary to Japan's war machine and industries—and other essential goods and supplies to Japan.

Adoption of additional precau-

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Diplomacy
Westerly, R. I.—Westerly police are praising an officer who tempered devotion to duty with diplomacy and backed into his job. Assigned to patrol a shore road and enforce an ordinance against undressing in automobiles or the woods, the officer glimpsed through a growth of underbrush at a group of girls sun-bathing—au naturel—in a clearing. The policeman did a snappy right-about-face, then marched, backwards, into the bushes yelling "clear out!" The girls did.

Curious
New Castle, Ind.—Farmer Ray Morgan, investigating a noise in his field toward midnight, called out, "what are you doing there?" "Just measuring your wheat," said the intruder—and got into an automobile and drove off. Next morning Morgan sent the license number to police and they looked up the man. He said he and friends had got so curious about the height of unusually tall wheat on Morgan's farm that they'd finally taken a yardstick and flashlight and gone out to check it.

On the first hole, Lestman holed out his 151 yard tee shot. When he did it on the next hole, 235 yards, Wolk threatened to walk back to the clubhouse. But Lestman was all through shooting aces and finished the nine-hole course in 34.

New York (P)—It wasn't so much the fact that Daniel Gregorwitz' cows were loose as it was the place where they were pasturing, the magistrate indicated as Gregorwitz appeared before him. The two cows, the jurist told, simply were turned loose each day to find grass somewhere along the streets of Brooklyn. Gregorwitz, a contractor, reported "they been eatin' like that for three years," producing enough milk for his family and a little for dairy purposes besides. The magistrate, ordering a $5 fine, prescribed more conventional pastures or sale of the cows.

Barnyard Evolution Furs Will Cost Less — In 1950 Reason: A New Blend of Sheep

(Third of five articles)

By JOHN GROVER

(P) Feature Service Writer

Beltville, Md.—They're blending sheep like whiskey on the U. S. experimental farm and what they get is swank fur coats. Distilleries use a little rare whiskey to flavor vats of commoner beverage. The U. S. bureau of animal industry is doing the same thing, using Karakul sheep for "flavor."

It happens that broadtail, Persian lamb and caracul furs all come from Karakul lambs. The U. S. fur industry imports 250,000 lambskins a year. It would be swell if U. S. sheepmen got that money.

Trouble is, there are 10,000 or fewer Karakul sheep in the U. S. No more can be imported, because of prohibitive quarantine laws. There are plenty of common, mutation-chop sheep, but their wool doesn't make caracul fur.

So the problem of U. S. experts is to take that little drop of Karakul blood available here, blend it with common sheep, and hope the resultant offspring retains the fur quality of all-Karakul pelts.

Keep On Distributing
It's working out successfully at the experimental farms, where a flock of 500 fur-bearers is on hand already. Karakul rams were bred to Corriedale, Navajo and highland blackface sheep. The half-bred descendants didn't have exceptional pelts. They bred back to the Karakuls, and found the three-quarter-bred lambs sported good skins. They're continuing the blending, distributing that little bit of Karakul blood around, establishing a strain of sheep that runs true for fur quality.

Bring Same Prices
What it means is that Miss America's 1950 fur coat probably will cost less, that U. S. farmers—just a few at first, and then in increasing numbers—will be cutting in on a $2,000,000 market. Any farmers, using the lore gained in the federal experiments, can build up a herd of half-bred ewes. Then, using a Karakul ram, he can breed a whole crop of three-quarter-bred fur lambs, year after year, for a healthy cash income!

The cross-bred pelts are indistinguishable from imported Karakul skins. They bring the same prices on the fur market. It all adds up to the summary that the U. S. experimental farm, by making a fur coat a la cock-tail, is establishing what can become a new American farm industry, giving U. S. women a chance at smart coats cheaper, because home-bred Karakuls won't have to stand round-the-world shipping costs.

Mr. Allen A. Baker, Chairman, United Service Organizations Campaign, Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Allen:

May I take this opportunity to thank you and congratulate you on the splendid type of leadership which you displayed in the successful campaign just concluded to raise Kingston's quota for providing wholesome recreation for our boys who are serving in the armed forces of our country.

Your perseverance, indefatigable and irrepressible enthusiasm were an inspiration to all those who worked with you in this patriotic cause in which $7,404.11 was raised—$2,700.00 more than our quota.

I also wish to thank the other officers and members of the campaign committee, the ward captains, aides and workers, the agencies of publicity, those who so generously contributed and all others who helped to make the campaign the great success which it was.

If the present emergency long continues, other campaigns will be necessary to carry on the necessary work being done by the six service organizations comprising the U.S.O., and I would appreciate it very much if you and your local U.S.O. organization would consider yourselves the official and permanent organizations for raising funds for the boys in uniform until they all come marching home.

President's Birthday Parties Net $2,104,460

Washington, July 23—Sweeping high above all former records, the 1941 celebration of the President's birthday to raise funds for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, produced a net total of $2,104,460.53, President Roosevelt was told today. This was $697,214.79 more than the $1,407,245.74 raised in 1940, the previous high mark.

Expenses of the National Committee for the celebration of the President's birthday were $136,966.61, or 6.1 per cent of the total net amount raised.

The President received the campaign report in his executive office at the White House. The total figures were revealed for the first time in an inscribed testimonial report and audit handed him by Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee, and Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation, and former law partner of the President.

President Roosevelt was told by Mr. O'Connor that the enthusiastic response of Americans to the appeal for funds enables the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to drive forward with all possible speed in the nation-wide fight against the crippling disease.

Mr. Morgan told the President that the more than two million dollars net proceeds consisted almost entirely of small contributions—dollars and dimes and even nickels and pennies—contributed by millions of citizens.

Under the usual plan of the National Foundation, approximately one-half of the net proceeds, or $1,096,865.84 will be used by State and County Chapters of the Foundation to aid those in the various communities who have been stricken with the disease.

The other portion of the funds, or $1,007,594.69 will be expended by the National Foundation to combat epidemics of infantile paralysis, for research, for aiding hospitals and institutions in the study of the treatment of the after effects of the disease and in disseminating knowledge regarding the disease and its treatment to the medical profession and the public.

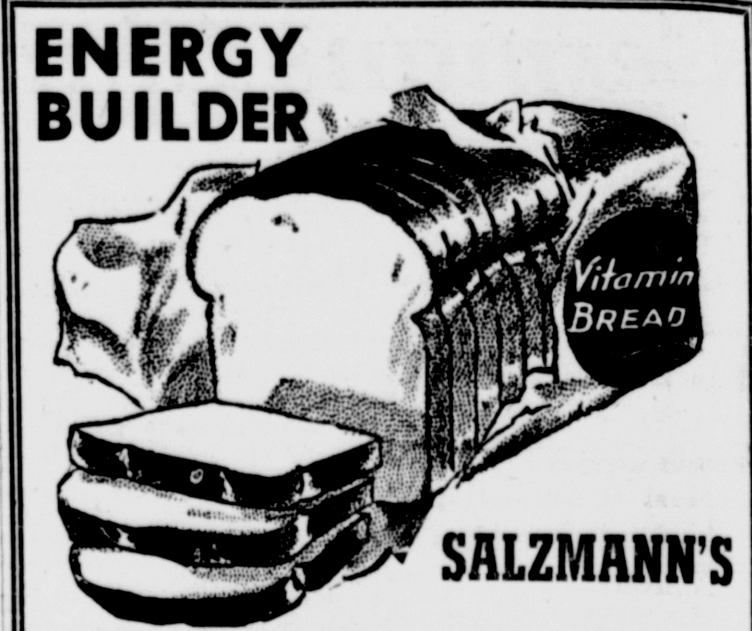

Mr. O'Connor reported that the National Foundation in addition to making grants of money for many purposes in the fight against the disease has created a huge reservoir of splints and braces for use in times of emergency.

To win a reward of $100 offered by cattlemen of Ciudad Guzman, Mexico, a poor peasant caught a wolf which had killed over 200 cattle, but when he delivered the carcass the cattlemen deducted for petty thefts he had committed previously, leaving him less than $20.

First West Shore Railroad Engineer Dies at Woodcliff

George Fisher, former resident of this city who was the first man to be hired by the West Shore railroad when the line started operations, died at Woodcliff, N. J., Monday at the age of 84. The deceased, who was the first engineer on the line, retired from service 14 years ago.

Mr. Fisher was born in this city October 24, 1856, the son of the late Charles and Louise Fisher. He is survived by three sons, Dr. Harry Fisher of Stamford, Conn., Dr. Edwin Fisher of Weehawken, N. J., and Dr. Alton Fisher of Woodcliff, N. J.; also a brother, William Fisher of this city; two sisters, Mrs. Adelaide Freer of this city and Mrs. Albert E. Bushnell of Plymouth.

The former Kingston resident started his railroad career with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Line. Then in 1883 when the West Shore, then known as New York, West Shore and Buffalo, began operation, he was transferred from the New Haven line. Mr. Fisher was given the distinction of running the first train on this route. Later he was appointed roundhouse foreman in this city.

Before his retirement in 1927, which included a span of 44 years in the business, Mr. Fisher operated trains out of this city. He moved to Woodcliff about 40 years ago and worked on the trains leaving Weehawken.

Mr. Fisher, due to his long service with the railroad, was a familiar and well-liked employee on the West Shore system preceding his retirement. He had many veteran engineers starting their career as firemen for the "No. 1" man on the roll.

Besides serving as chief engineer, or presiding officer of his local for several years, Mr. Fisher was active in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He attended many conventions as a delegate. He also was the oldest member of Masonic Lodge No. 10 of this city.

Funeral services for the deceased will be held this evening at 8 o'clock at the Sharpe Funeral Home in Union City, N. J. Burial will be in Wiltwyck cemetery Thursday at noon.

Seaman of Lloyd held Lowers for a hearing later.

Slight Fire Attracts Big Crowd

Freeman Photo

Fire, which started from an electric iron, filled The Mart at 31 North Front street, with heavy dense smoke which was pouring out of the building as Officer Carlton Taylor was passing, and he promptly called the police department, while a still alarm was sent in to the fire department.

The store in which the fire broke out was formerly occupied by Nugent's, and is next door to Walter Ostander's men's clothing house.

When Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy reached the store in response to the still alarm, he promptly turned in an alarm from Box 1432, which brought additional fire fighting equipment and men to the scene.

The store is located almost at the head of Wall street, and in order to handle traffic, Lieutenant Fred Stout of the police department assigned eight policemen to the scene of the fire in order to give the fire department an opportunity to work unhindered.

So dense was the smoke that the firemen were forced to don smoke masks as they entered the store. The fire, said Chief Murphy, was discovered in time for the electric iron which had been left connected had become so heated that it had set fire to the ironing board and the fire had communicated to the floor when the firemen broke into the store.

Fire Chief Murphy said that the fire had caused but little damage to the building, which is owned by Walter Ostander, but that there was considerable smoke damage.

As the fire was in the uptown business district a large number of people, both on foot and in automobiles, kept the policemen busy handling traffic until the fire was extinguished.

Old Cell Block May Be Abandoned

Green Haven Prison Might Absorb Men Who Would Be Placed There

Albany, N. Y., July 23 (P)—A century-old cell block at Sing Sing prison, once termed a "disgrace" by the state correction department, probably will be abandoned when a new $8,000,000 prison at Green Haven, Dutchess county, opens October 1.

State Correction Commissioner John A. Lyons said today addition of Green Haven's 2,016-inmate capacity to state prison facilities "will, we hope, permit us to abandon the old Sing Sing block."

The much-criticized unit, built in 1848, is part of the original prison at Ossining and is used to house newly-committee prisoners until quarters in the modern portion of the institution are available.

The state correction department repeatedly has described the block as damp, unsanitary and generally "unfit for human habitation."

One department report, after an inspection in 1936, said its continued use "is a standing disgrace to the state."

About 500 prisoners are confined in the section which, Lyons said, has 906 cells.

Green Haven prison, under present plans, will receive all convicts, averaging about 30 weekly, from the New York city area. Thereafter they will be distributed to Sing Sing, with a capacity of 2,640; Attica, 1,996; Auburn 1,376; Clinton prison at Dannemora, 1,971, and Great Meadow at Comstock, about 1,200.

A few, mostly first offenders believed likely prospects for vocational and education training, will go to the state's medium security prison at Wallkill.

Tool Shed Burns

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a small tool shed and packing house on the Winfield Cole place at Ulster Park about 8 o'clock this morning. Located between the house and barn the firemen fortunately were able to save other buildings because of the absence of wind at the time. Water pumped from a brook near the property was used to wet down adjoining buildings by members of the Esopus and St. Remy fire departments. The building was of one-story frame construction and was entirely gutted by the flames.

ASIA'S NAZIS

Japan, caught in an international crisis, seems inclined to meet it as usual by going off the deep end. Financially and politically bankrupt, it may dodge its tragic domestic problems and seek to rally its starving and half-rebellious people by the old imperial device of foreign conquest. The generals and admirals probably will have their way.

They are expected to attack Russia in Asia while that nation is very busy defending itself in Europe. It may be Hitler's suggestion; in any case it will help him.

The Japanese imperialists have long wanted eastern Siberia and its harbor of Vladivostok, and that is a natural desire in their situation. It looks bad, though, for the United States, with special regard for Alaska, just across the Behring Strait. We don't want Japan any closer than she is now.

After taking Siberia, if she did so, Japan would doubtless strike south to complete her subjugation of Indo-China and Siam, then to conquer Singapore, the Dutch Indies and the Philippines. They are all on her program.

Naturally the United States could not stand idly by watching such a drive for the destruction of our interests in the Far East. We have a strong navy in the Pacific—stronger than Japan's.

INVENTORS HAVE FUN

The 80,000 persons registered as members of the Inventors of America are said to be deluging the Patent Office with nearly 650 inventions a week. Most of them are for defense. And some of them may be good.

Meanwhile the "gadgets," as they do not object to being called, have had one of their sectional meetings in New York with an exhibition of 250 to 300 items. And some of their inventions, at least, showed that inventors, serious about most of their work, have a sense of humor.

One such gadget was a cigarette lighter apparently inspired by the technique of Prof. Rube Goldberg. It starts with a mouse trap and depends on the presence and cooperation of a mouse to make it work. A trained white mouse might do the trick.

At any rate, the mouse is supposed to walk into a trap which, when sprung, starts a small cannon ball to rolling. The ball hits a trip that sets off a catapult that causes a kitchen match to light. If there are no mice at hand, or they refuse to walk into the trap, the inventor says, you can give up smoking. Or strike a match and light your own cigarette.

BROOKLYN HITS BACK

It's unusual for people in the older and more settled cities of this country to flaunt their civic patriotism. They rather take their superiority for granted and expect the world to agree with them. But Brooklyn, widely known as New York's Dormitory, has been driven to self-defense. It finds a lively champion in Sidney Ascher, a young man born in Brooklyn, educated in Brooklyn and married in Brooklyn, who has organized a Society for the Prevention of the Propagation of Disparaging Remarks about Brooklyn.

He has adopted the motto, "We Hate People Who Hate Brooklyn," and he writes indignant letters to the papers protesting against its defamation.

That is all right with the rest of America, and most of our people will admire him for being so loyal to his home town. But he's dead wrong in his main assumption, says a friend who once lived in the aforesaid metropolitan dormitory. "People don't hate Brooklyn," he says, "They just pity it."

"666"

Maybe there was no special significance in the fact that No. 666 was the 666th number drawn from the goldfish bowl in the second draft lottery. But the people who like to study mathematical chances were interested. It was the sort of thing that could happen only once in a few million chances, and this was the time. It ought to be a portent, even if it isn't.

Corporal Raymond J. Deveau of Beverly,

Mass., who drew the little capsule from the bowl, probably was as thrilled as a player who draws one of those once-in-a-lifetime bridge hands. He was lucky, too, for his responsibility ended there. A phenomenal card deal has to be played, a task before which many hardy players falter and often fail.

Anyhow, 666 will now be as famous as the first numbers drawn in the draft lotteries of 1917 and 1940, not to mention 1941.

A GET-UP LAW

It is expected that a new daylight-saving law will be enacted soon, making the time uniform within the different east-and-west zones and getting most of us up earlier in the morning. The early-rising, if actually accomplished, will be a good thing in more than one way. Though intended primarily to get through the working day earlier and thus save artificial light, it will also facilitate a longer working day. We are coming to need more working hours as the stress of our armament job grows.

It is strange, though, that we should need laws about it, at least in the summer time. The morning hours are so much more enjoyable, as a rule, than the evening hours, that intelligent people might be expected to get up and enjoy them as a matter of course.

With all these "draftees" and "selectees" and "inductees" and so on, the rest of us feel like softies.

Wheat is a big problem in Europe because there's so little of it, and also in America because there's so much of it.

When we grown-ups go to such pains to keep kids from getting run over by automobiles, it doesn't seem fair that the kids should run over us with their bikes.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)
MIND A GREAT FACTOR

It is gratifying to find so many men and women who now get a thorough examination by their physician and dentist once and twice a year. While this is great health insurance in that any condition that is not normal is detected early and can usually be corrected, nevertheless there is one important point which may not be given much consideration. I refer to the great relief in the mind of the individual to know that despite symptoms sometimes present, he has the feeling that there is no organic trouble present. This relief of mind is an important factor in keeping up the general health of the body.

Next to worry about the heart, the worry about "indigestion" might well come next, yet more than half the patients who consult their physician about chronic indigestion or some stomach disturbance have no organic trouble; their symptoms are due to not having peace of mind or relief of mind.

Dr. G. Canby Robinson in Bulletin of Johns Hopkins Hospital states that, in order to show that social disturbances—worry over symptoms, finances, domestic conditions—cause illness, 50 successive patients with digestive disorders were studied without selection, in the stomach and intestine clinic of Johns Hopkins Hospital. "Patients with digestive disturbances (indigestion) were known, frequently ill because of emotional disturbances, but we were not prepared to find, as we did, that adverse social conditions were entirely or importantly related as a cause of illness in 44 of the 50 patients (88 per cent). In 30 patients no organic disease could be discovered."

These figures tell their own story. Of 50 cases, 44 were caused or aggravated by social conditions—emotions—and 30 of the 50 cases had no real or organic condition whatever. The thought, then, is that instead of waiting for symptoms to occur, you should visit your physician and get a complete examination. Then should some symptoms arise, you can feel assured that they are not of an organic nature but are due in the great majority of cases to nervousness or emotional disturbances such as worry or fear. It should not be too hard, therefore, to think or talk yourself out of fear of organic disease.

DEFENSE BOND

Quiz

Q. Does an album filled with Stamps automatically become a Bond that will pay interest and mature in 10 years?

Q. Why should children be encouraged to buy Savings Stamps?

A. Because by buying Stamps they write their names on a Roll of Honor of Americans who are doing their part to show the dictators that united America will never flinch to preserve her sacred liberty.

Note.—To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office or bank, or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C., for an order form.

Private Utility Industry Is in Danger of Being Taken Over Permanently by Administration

(By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, July 23.—America's $12,000,000,000 private utility industry is in danger of being taken over permanently by the administration with the war emergency as the excuse for the fulfillment of a plot that has been evolving for the last eight years.

Violating the promises solemnly given to the investors who own the utility stocks and bonds of operating companies as well as holding companies, the squeeze by the government to force the private companies either to sell or go out of business has begun.

The tremendous power of priorities in equipment and materials is being used already in discriminating against private companies and government power project directors are being compelled to order from Washington to take steps that will force the private companies out of existence.

On September 21, 1932, President Roosevelt in a campaign speech at Portland, Oregon, said: "State-owned or federal-owned power sites can and should properly be developed by government itself. When so developed private capital should be given first opportunity to transmit and distribute the power on the basis of the best service at the lowest rates to give a reasonable profit only."

On July 6, 1941, the Seattle Times in a news article on its front page said:

"Secretary of the Interior Ickes believes there is no place for the Puget Sound Power and Light Company and similar power companies in the state as private utilities, says Abe Fortas, newly appointed public power division director. Private power is a 'handicap' to the Ickes program."

Already the officials of the Bonneville project are refusing to make a contract with the Portland General Electric Company for the continuance of power supply unless the latter agrees to sell out the company to the government. Having discouraged the private power companies from their normal expansion the administration refuses now to assure these companies that the power they are now getting from Bonneville will be sold to them as in the past and hence arrangements are on a month to month basis—a death sentence in disguise.

Meanwhile there is a big demand for power for defense. It might be assumed that the present shortage justifies the building of the T.V.A. and the Bonneville projects. But the fact is that the reliance of the country on hydro-electric plants is dangerous and already drought seasons in the southwest have demonstrated how much more secure the nation would have been had the private utilities been permitted to balance expansion between steam plants and hydro-electric developments as in the past.

What really has happened will some day be recognized as a major political scandal. In their anxiety to get power loads for the big hydro-electric projects, the New Dealers used their influence at Washington to compel the locating of big defense plants and industries near the big dams of public power, thus taking away from the normal industrial growth of the area the power it might have had and ignoring the big power reserves in and around New York and Chicago and other mid-western and eastern points. Senators and representatives from these states have been asleep even as congressmen from far western states have jeopardized the expansion of the normal industrial operations in their own areas.
Then, too, through rural electrification money furnished by Congress, transmission lines are being duplicated in several places, notably Texas, so that the markets of private power companies are being raided. Coincidentally in Washington the Federal Power Commission is sending its agents around the country to reduce the valuations of existing operating companies and thus cut down potential income that can be earned under state regulation of rates. This together with the growth in taxes is suffocating the operating company financial structures and making it difficult for them to raise new money.
A feud is on, moreover, between the Federal Power Commission and Secretary Ickes for control of the big public power systems. Mr. Ickes already has his clutches on oil and is now after the job of dictator in the electrical power industry. This together with control of coal and mining would make Mr. Ickes the most powerful man in Washington next to the President and build up a political machine for his use in 1944.
As for the investors they stand to lose far greater sums through these new government holding company maneuvers than they ever did in the days of the manipulators of high finance back in 1929. It is estimated that if the war goes three years, the private utility industry will disappear within that time. Unless some opinion calls a halt it may be doomed anyway by the government competition which now demoralizes operating companies and by the strangulation process now being applied to holding companies by the S.E.C. Thus is America introduced slowly to state capitalism and national socialism.

Stamps IN THE NEWS

By the AP Feature Service

Stories of finds among early United States stamps always are cropping up, sending people off to their attics to look over old love letters and such in trunks and boxes.

This time it was a major philatelic discovery by two brothers who prefer to remain anonymous because their family name is well known.

The price they got for the stamps they found apparently is so large that it, too, must remain unknown. But here are the facts as told by Norman Serphos, president of the Scott Stamp and Coin Co., which bought the find.

The stamps, which carry the red grid cancellation of Rochester, N. Y., one used during 1849-51, are of the valuable 1847's issued by the act of Congress (on March 3 of that year) in denominations of five and ten cents. The brothers found the stamps on wrappings around old checks, mortgages and bonds. The older brother (he's 35) bought a stamp catalogue and saw similar stamps listed at "block of four, $1,200."

The brothers had a block of eight. So the older went to a dealer to see what he could see. With him he had the finest known block of eight five-cent stamps of 1847; the largest used block of 12 five-centers; a fine block of six ten-centers; and a unit of three ten-centers. In six years the stamps will be 100 years old.

Benjamin Franklin's portrait is on the design of the five-cent stamp, George Washington on the ten-center. Catalogue value of a block of four of the ten-cent blocks is $5,000. And the brothers are going through some more papers now. Nor can you blame them for looking again.

A similar discovery was made about 15 years ago. Then a block of five-cent New York George Washington stamps of 1845 turned up in the back of an old desk. Today their value is probably $10,000, according to Mr. Serphos.

Here are some tips for amateur attic rummaging:
1. Look through old papers, even the envelopes with no stamps on the cover.
2. Leave the stamps the way you find them when you send them to a dealer. This is important because it helps to prove their authenticity, and prevents damage to the stamps in trying to get them off of the cover. Furthermore, it may turn out that the stamps are more valuable on the cover than off.

3. Properly identify the stamps so that you can recognize them as your property. A good way is to put your initials in pencil (never in ink) on the back of the stamp.
4. Send them to a reliable dealer for appraisal. (You will find reliable dealers who appraise stamps free, but require postage to return them to you.)

Motor vehicle license fees collected in 1940 by the 48 states amounted to $387,747,000.

Washington — Vice President Henry A. Wallace has been "Mr. Big" of the United States Senate for six months now and it is becoming apparent that it has been some years since a Vice President has played a bigger hand in behind-the-scenes congressional affairs.

Some observers say that not even John Nance Garner, when he was riding the administration hobby horse in the early days of the New Deal, was more active in keeping the legislative wheels rolling smoothly.

The gentle, soft-spoken former Secretary of Agriculture was credited previously with being a scholarly sort of farm economist, with no penchant for politics, and only a slight interest in raising himself by his own political bootstraps. When he was placed on the Democratic ticket as stablemate for President Roosevelt in his third term race, all sorts of excuses were advanced by the administration boys and heaps of criticism were showered down by his opponents.

Oddly enough, no one had the foresight to try to prove that "Hank" Wallace might become a decided congressional asset to the President and the Democratic party. But in that very role, he is beginning to prove his worth.

According to cloakroom chatter, the president of the Senate has taken a hand in several legislative bouts—the last of which was an effort to iron out conflicting views over price control legislation.

He Gets Around

Wallace has made it his business to know the members of the upper house. There's hardly a day that you can't peek through the door of one of the north wing luncheon rooms and find an amazing assemblage of gentlemen of the Senate. Pro and anti-New Deal senators Democrats and Republicans—all alike find hospitality at the Vice President's table.

And when he does an athletic outfit in the Senate gym or on the tennis courts, he's the same good sport with political opponents that he is when with those who invariably bat out administrative home runs.

Simulated Weapons Have Very Important Function

While defense industries are going into mass production of many types of weapons, troops engaged in maneuvers are making effective use of dummy weapons in their tactical training, and continued use of such substitutes is indicated until all units get their full quota of equipment, the War Department announced today.

The expansion of the Army during the past year has progressed much more rapidly than the manufacture of the most modern weapons with which to equip it. However, all units have sufficient weapons for training.

Furthermore all troops learned to handle their basic arms. Since tactical employment of a weapon rather than its technical manipulation is paramount in maneuvers, little training value is lost by the substitution of a stove pipe for a mortar or an oak bough for a machine gun.

For example, the anti-tank company of an infantry regiment in the square division should have twelve 37 millimeter anti-tank guns under current tables of organization. A unit may have received only four of them, however. The guns are rotated through the company until every man has been thoroughly schooled in handling them. They learn range calculation, the mechanical operation of the weapon and practice the siting of it in the most effective manner, with respect to shelter and terrain advantages.

Once troops have learned to aim and fire the weapon, its tactical disposition in battle is the most vital function. Should it be sited at the bottom of a defile or on a knoll commanding its approaches? Should it be placed on the crest or below the crest of a hill? Should a number of guns be disposed in depth so that a column of tanks may be pounded repeatedly by successive guns?

These are questions that can be answered only by practical experience on the maneuver ground, where the umpire will pass judgment on their realistic use. A genuine weapon is naturally the most desirable. But since the weapons are not to be fired (blank ammunition is limited virtually to rifles and machine guns), the position that troops select for their gun is the crucial factor. Therefore, for tactical training purposes, a stick of wood or a length of steel pipe will have practically the same effect as the real gun.

An imitation gun, well placed in maneuvers, may be better than a real weapon that is sited in an exposed position. The crew of any weapon, real or fancied, must justify its placement to the umpire. They must work out range data, prove that their target is not masked by trees or other terrain obstructions, and demonstrate that the "enemy" does not have them under fire.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Back in December, 1913, the interesting question of whether whiskey should or should not be used in treating pneumonia cases was brought up at a meeting of the Board of Health when a local physician reported that he had been unable to obtain any whiskey in the city to treat one of his patients.

The doctor thought it would be a good idea for the health board to lay in a supply of whiskey to be used in cases of emergency, but no action was taken by the health board when some of the members expressed the opinion that all physicians did not believe in administering whiskey in pneumonia cases.

Dr. Frank A. Johnston, health officer, in reply to questions by the board, expressed the opinion that a majority of the city's physicians favored the use of whiskey in treating such cases.

The police board meeting that month at the city hall voted to increase the salaries of the members of the police department. The police chief's salary was boosted to $2,400 and the sergeants to $1,830, while the policemen were granted salaries of $120 a month.

The board also appointed Frank Fatum, who headed the civil service list, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Cornelius Van Buren.

That month Mayor Palmer cancelled appointed William C. Shafer and William Dugan as members of the police board to succeed R. E. Leighton and William Cashion.

At the December meeting of the city fathers the aldermen also voted to grant City Clerk Fred H. Doremus a salary of $2,500 a year, and Deputy City Clerk Joseph D. Turner a salary of $1,700, an increase of $500 a year in each case. Salary raises that year of city employees were due largely to the increased cost of living in Kingston, following the close of the first World War. Butter was selling that month in Kingston at from 71 to 75 cents a pound, while eggs were retailing at 55 cents a dozen.

The price of pork and other meats was about the same as prices prevailing today in the city markets.

Canned music as phonograph records were called was very popular and good records could be bought for 75 cents each with such singers as Henry Burr, Ada Jones, Billy Murray and other popular artists, while for prices ranging from a dollar to two dollars records made by opera stars could be had.

This was in the era before the radio came into existence, and there were phonographs in practically every house in the city.

To make the aluminum required for defense purposes in 1942, enough power will be needed to light New York city and keep the wheels of its industries turning for three and a half years.

"Two Survived," by Guy Pearce Jones

"This story of seven men in an open boat," writes William McFee in his introduction to "Two Survived," "if it proves nothing else, shows how little the breed of seamen has deteriorated, and how richly they deserve our prompt assistance."

It does indeed. For "Two Survived" is the story of an exploit that makes Captain Bligh's seem rather like a turn in a swan boat through Central Park lake. Robert Tapscott and Wilbert Widdicombe were seventy days in the jolly boat of the torpedoed "Anglo-Saxon," and for more than half of that period they were without water, and without food, barring only occasional crabs found in seaweed, and the weed itself.

The "Anglo-Saxon" was attacked without warning on August 21, 1940, by the German raider "Weser." Later the chief officer of the "Anglo-Saxon" decided that the "Weser" had been determined from the beginning to sink its victim and kill all the crew to avoid investigation. The "Weser" systematically raked the "Anglo-Saxon" with pom-poms, machine gun bullets and the usual heavier charges. All these bullets were incendiaries, and the life boats were not only crushed—later, when the jolly boat had escaped, two life rafts were also fired on and sunk, the Chief Officer's log shows.

In any case, seven got away in the excitement, missing the "Anglo-Saxon" still whirling propped by an inch. Pilcher, the Sparks, rowed hours without mentioning that his foot had been shot to a pulp. Gunner Richard Penny also was badly injured. Tapscott was injured most inconveniently, but not seriously.

Gradually the water gave out, and the men as well. One by one the men either died heroically, as did Pilcher, or gave up in despair and went over-side. At last only Tapscott and Widdicombe were left, and ironically, these had been the two who had been the two balanced on a knife-edge between death and life. It is an amazing story that Guy Pearce Jones has to tell, and he has had the good sense to tell it without heroics. The final irony came after the landing in the Bahamas—Widdicombe apparently was drowned on his way home to England.

Sins Uncovered In Good Book

Baltimore, Md. (AP) — Police raided a boothblack stand looking for policy books. One officer, observing a Bible on a shelf, commented: "I don't believe there are any numbers in there." "Oh, yes, there's the Book of Numbers in there," quipped the boothblack, a 66-year-old Negro known as "The Reverend." The policeman didn't know he meant the fourth book of the Old Testament. He thumbed through the Bible. It yielded several slips identified in court as lottery markers.

Pile of Aluminum Gradually Grows

Depository on Broadway Gets Large Variety

Kingston's aluminum depository on the vacant lot on Broadway at West O'Reilly street, is gradually being filled with the used aluminum that is being collected in the drive now under way in the city.

All sorts of aluminum articles are being deposited in the pile which each day grows steadily larger. Included in the pile are aluminum beer kegs, old washing machines, and pots and pans of all sizes and shapes.

With the increasing growth of the pile of old aluminum a special officer has been assigned to duty at the depository.

The work of canvassing and collecting aluminum is proceeding in all of the wards of the city. It is reported that the Twelfth ward was the first ward to complete its job, and as a result a large pile of aluminum articles are now piled in the rear of the Excelsior fire house on Hurley avenue, and will be trucked to the depository on Broadway shortly.

Twelfth Ward Collectors Get Huge Pile in Hour

Two and a half large truck loads of aluminum was the collection made in the Twelfth Ward last evening within an hour when Alderman John Garon, chairman, aided by firemen from Excelsior Hose Company under direction of William B. Martin, foreman, covered the ward using trucks donated by numerous public spirited citizens.

The aluminum was collected and deposited at the engine house on Hurley avenue and later removed to the main dump by city trucks. Foreman Martin and Alderman Garon are appreciative of the co-operation given by the people of the ward, the firemen who assisted and the several persons who donated their trucks for the collection.

Collection Bin Shows More Aluminum

Several truckloads of used aluminum were dumped in the collection bin on the corner of West O'Reilly street and Broadway yesterday and made a noticeable increase since yesterday. Collections will continue throughout the week by the various ward committees.

As the aluminum collections were deposited yesterday these representatives of the various war veteran associations of the city met at the collection depot to watch the metal pour in. Left to right, they are Stanley Dempsey, commander of Kingston Post, No. 150, American Legion; Charles B. Skane, commander of Joyce-Schirick Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Mayor C. J. Heiselman; Arthur K. Fox, commander of Company M, New York Infantry Veterans Association, and Peter J. Halloran, commander of Colonial Camp, No. 75, United States War Veterans.

Knox Says Japan Soon Will Move

tionary measures at U. S. Pacific outposts because of the proximity of Indo-China to the Philippines.

Because of the well-established policy in such matters it appeared to be a foregone conclusion that whatever action was taken would be with the full knowledge and co-operation of the British whose vital interests in the far Pacific closely parallel those of this country.

In fact, in London, Vernon Bartlett, an independent member of parliament, said in the News Chronicle that he believed British-American discussion already had ended in complete agreement as to steps to be taken should Japan move southward.

Indo-China, cut off from France by the war, would be able to put up only feeble resistance to a large-scale Japanese invasion, according to military experts, even if the Vichy government supported its Far Eastern colony.

Broad Action Anticipated

Shanghai, July 23 (AP)—The predominant opinion among observers today was that Japan was rushing military preparations for action both in southeastern Asia and in the north.

A move into French Indo-China was expected to come first, with foreign military quarters expressing the opinion it would start within a week.

They suggested it would consist of occupation of Saigon and other strategic southern Indo-China points followed by demands for bases and economic concessions.

The Japanese probably will put pressure on Thailand for a northern air base from which to bomb the Burma Road, these sources said, and attempt to dam the flow of American war materials to Chungking.

The Japanese were reported to fear American aid might reach such proportions that Japan and America would be engaged in open if undeclared war on Chinese soil.

The possibility of a Japanese attempt to drive from northern Indo-China into the province of Yunnan also was mentioned but the likelihood was generally discounted owing to the difficulty of the terrain and the necessity of utilizing extremely large forces.

Japanese troops, planes and ships were reported already concentrated at Hainan for the expected Indo-China move, and fleet transports were standing by near the mouth of the Pearl river.

Meanwhile conferences between Admiral Jean Decoux, governor general of Indo-China, and Major General Rashio Sumita, head of a Japanese military mission, continued at Hanoi. The two met for more than an hour yesterday. Official silence heightened the belief in some quarters that Sumita was presenting new demands.

LUFTWAFFE BOMBS RUSS CAPITAL

Making its first attack of importance on Moscow, the German luftwaffe sent an estimated 200 bombers over the Soviet capital at night. Reports of the effects were contradictory, the Germans claiming great fires were started while the Russians said the flames were extinguished and little damage was done. Meantime in the three circled areas the land battle continued, with London hearing a report that Germans in the Kiev sector appeared to be developing a thrust southward (arrow) along the right bank of the Dnieper.

Independently of these preparations, Japan's North China and Kwangtung armies were reported getting ready for action.

The Japanese have sharply limited civilian rail travel in North China, halted it altogether in Manchoukuo and discontinued ship passenger service between the northern Asiatic mainland and Japan. A strict press ban was imposed on reports of railway movements and the Japanese high command issued special orders warning officers and soldiers not to discuss plans.

Despite Japanese denials, it was reported here that Japanese military authorities were confiscating trains.

Some troops were believed already sent to Manchoukuo and Inner Mongolia while others, withdrawn from Hopei and Shansi, were reported concentrated near Peiping.

Would End Menace

Indications were seen that if Russia should collapse, the Kwangtung and North China armies would not miss the opportunity to drive Soviet forces out of the maritime provinces and end a menace reportedly regarded as a nightmare of Japan military authorities for the past 35 years.

Many Japanese officers expressed the opinion that Russia already was defeated since it had committed strategic suicide by throwing a majority of its reserves into the front-line fighting and failing to prepare for counterattacks.

hat-trick to accomplish his task. Not only are the Nazi wheels turning more slowly in the Russian mud than is their wont, but another aspect of the Fuehrer's gamble has gone wrong. Informed sources in Turkey say German Ambassador Von Papen, Hitler's number one diplomat, has confirmed the report that the Nazis are preparing to make England a favorable peace offer as soon as Russia gives in. Instead of waiting for this, however, Britain stiffened the Bolshevik stand by signing an alliance providing that neither side would make a separate peace.

Two Great Wars

The sum substance of all this is that, instead of securing a peace which would leave him master of the whole European continent, he may find himself caught between two great wars of attrition. That certainly will be true if he fails to conquer Russia within the next few weeks.

The extent of Hitler's gamble becomes more evident as we note the danger spots which he has left largely unguarded so that he might use all his resources to achieve a conquest which would be over so quickly that he would have done himself no harm. His greatest exhibition of daring has been in uncovering Britain.

As a result of the great reduction of Nazi bombers over the British Isles, and long the Atlantic shipping routes, the battle of the Atlantic has been favoring the Allies more than in almost any other period of the past year. That is a God-send for the British, for here lay one of their greatest dangers.

This breathing space also has given England a chance to repair damage and speed up her wheels of industry to correspond with the delivery of American aid across less troubled waters.

But of even greater import is the fact that daily the British bombing of objectives in German territory has become more intense and destructive. Authoritative sources in London yesterday said this was merely a prelude to the heaviest raids in history, to be launched against Germany in the next twelve weeks.

Meantime the great Mediterranean area, second in strategic importance to the British Isles themselves, has been stripped of Nazi forces. The result has been a vast strengthening of the Allied position throughout the whole zone, including the quick conquest of Syria, the consolidation of the British positions in the near and middle east, and the relieving of the German pressure on Turkey.

So we get a picture of the Allies being permitted to develop great strength in vital theatres while Hitler devotes most of his energy to Russia. No wonder he banked on a quick victory and is straining every nerve to force it.

Albany Nurse Is Safe Again in U. S. A.

Norfolk, Va., July 23 (AP)—Their ship torpedoed some 400 miles off the coast of Greenland while en route to Great Britain, four American Red Cross nurses came home yesterday under the strong arm of the U. S. navy with a vivid story of 12 days in an open boat in the North Atlantic.

Picked up July 5 by an American destroyer, they were taken first to a naval hospital at Reykjavik, Iceland, for treatment of gangrene of the feet and exposure before coming here in a navy transport commanded by Capt. Clarence Guiberson.

The four, who sailed June 5 from New Orleans aboard a 7,000-ton vessel, were Marion Blissett of Detroit, Mich.; Victoria Pelc of Auburn, N. Y.; Rachel St. Pierre of Boston, and Lilian M. Pesticak of Albany, N. Y.

Their rescue was announced without details by the navy July 9. Two others of the party were picked up and are now in a hospital at Londonderry, Ireland, but the Red Cross had no word of the other four.

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

By WATKINS E. WRIGHT

YESTERDAY, Now Henry Pell is up against hard fact. He has seen too much of Marie Mason, and his wife, Luella, has left him to establish residence for a Florida divorce. Tommy McIntyre has told Henry that he will marry Luella later, if she will have him. And Marie, whose determination that Henry should get into radio caused it all, is proving very cool indeed to Henry—now that Henry missed the job she had planned for him.

Chapter 24

Infernal Triangle

"No thanks," said Henry, "no drink. I've got too much thinking to do."

"Very well, suit yourself," Marie went into the bedroom and closed the door none too gently.

Henry, left alone, sat down at the piano. He ran his fingers up and down the keyboard a couple of times, and then he began to play over the setting of one of his songs.

He played softly, slowly—his thoughts going southward, crossing the Mason and Dixon Line, coming to rest beside a slowly flowing river. Willow branches caressing the surface of the water.

Sunlight flickering through the leaves. . . . A woodthrush calling from somewhere in the thick woods. . . . A negro woman calling to a runaway pickaninny.

Home—tranquility—

"All right," said Marie back of him, "let's have a showdown."

Henry turned quickly. "I don't like that word," he said. "I don't think we've got to have any such thing."

"Call it what you like," said Marie. She dropped into a low chair. "All I know is that I've never been so mad and upset in all my life."

Henry sat down facing her. Anger became her, he thought. So did the deep red material of which her lounging pajamas were made. The color made her eyes seem even darker, brought out the rich auburn tint of her thick hair, auburn tints that weren't always visible.

"I'm pretty well upset myself," he said presently.

"The idea, giving that job to a female," Marie flared. "I could wring her neck with perfect delight."

"There, there, honey," Henry soothed. "Get hold of yourself. . . feeling like that doesn't do Alma Latham any harm, and you any good."

"What's more, Henry," Marie went on, "I could wring your neck also."

"Really? . . . Well, if you must know the truth, Marie, I could wring it myself." Henry gazed across the room. "Everything happens at once, if it's bad."

"What do you mean?"

"I didn't get the radio job, and Luella's gone."

"Gone? . . . Where?"

"Well, for heaven's sake!"

"I'm a grass-widower," Henry said. He was glad that he could sound sort of flippant. "She's left me flat—in a flat."

"Not bad, eh?"

"Henry, will you stop trying to be funny," said Marie, "and tell me just what happened?"

"All I know is that she walked out on me," said Henry. "I found a note when I got back from Chicago this morning. . . . Little Luella couldn't take the bitter with the better, after all. Or maybe she thought there was too much of the bitter."

"You mean she—she—found out that I was in Chicago also?"

"Yep."

"Who told her?"

"Tommy McIntyre," said Henry. Then, as he saw Marie growing angry, he said: "Wait a minute, Marie. He didn't tell her intentionally. Henry explained how it happened, and added: 'So, there you are! There's our little infernal triangle in a nut-shell.' He grinned again, 'Mixing my metaphors perhaps, but let it pass.'"

No Solution

"SHE had no right to jump at conclusions," said Marie. "She's got nothing on either of us. You know that as well as I do."

"Of course," Henry agreed. "But I suppose you'll have to marry me now, Marie, and do right by little Henry."

"Don't talk like an idiot! Everything's gone wrong, and it's all your fault!"

"My fault?"

"Yes—not being here to get the radio job, and letting—"

"Listen, Marie, my job in Chicago meant livelihood. Henry cut in. 'I couldn't leave things there unfinished and rush back here to see about an uncertainty.'"

"It wouldn't have been an uncertainty, if you'd shown more spunk!"

"Meaning, I suppose, that I'm just a spineless, spunkless hunk of humanity. Is that it?"

"Oh, Henry," Marie waited. "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to sound so much like a fish-wife or something."

"Okay," said Henry. "We're both on edge. Believe it or not, Marie, it's something of a shock to come home and discover that your wife's departed."

"Yes, I understand, Henry, dear," Marie said, now calmer. "You poor dear boy!"

"Add to that the necessity of facing a situation that's darn serious," Henry said. "Getting the business with Luella all straightened out."

"You mean you're going to beg her to come back to you?"

Plans Under Way For Redecoration Of Local Church

Extensive work is being done on the St. James Methodist Church building, which occupies a commanding place in the uptown section of the city of Kingston at the corner of Fair and Pearl streets. The church building was erected about 50 years ago, and during the past half of a century has served well a membership and constituency of upwards of 1,400 people.

During the past few years it has been felt that some necessary improvements were imminent, and in the feeling that the church should be attractive and well cared for, the leaders in the church have gone ahead to provide these needs.

The Ladies Aid Society has had this in mind as a definite project for a number of years, and has set aside about $2,000 for the project. The Sunday school has accumulated about $500. The trustees have added about $2,000. The Sunday school classes are making definite contributions to the work. The total cost will be upwards of $5,000.

The work on the exterior of the building has been completed. It consists of repainting all the woodwork, the metal on the roof and towers, the replacing of broken slate, and the rebuilding of a large part of the main chimney.

The work on the interior is to begin next week, and will be completed in about six weeks. This work consists of the redecoration of the entire interior of the church. This painting and general work is to be done by the Lamb Studios of New York and Tenafly, N. J. This firm specializes in church decoration and furnishings.

The morning worship will be held each Sunday except the last Sunday in August. The work being done on the interior will of necessity cause some shifting around of the services to the different rooms in the church.

During the month of August the minister, the Rev. Joseph W. Chassey, will be on vacation, and the following ministers will be in charge of the services: August 3, Dr. George W. Grinton of the Five Points Mission of New York; August 10, the Rev. Wilfred S. Shaker of Phoenixia; August 17, Dr. Arthur Carroll, district superintendent; August 24, the Rev. Wesley Williams of Tannersville. When the work is completed on the interior of the church, a special day of opening is planned. Definite word of this will come later.

Retired Inspector Pays High Tribute To Philip Elting

Customs Officer Attends Funeral of Elting, Recalls Incidents Under Him

Rowland Story, retired inspector of customs who was in federal service for 44 years as storekeeper and inspector, was in this city today to attend the funeral services of Philip Elting, under whom Mr. Story served during the entire time Mr. Elting was Collector of the Port of New York. The last 27 years of his federal service Mr. Story served as an inspector and became well acquainted with Mr. Elting.

Mr. Story paid a high tribute to Mr. Elting and told of the high esteem in which every employee in the department held Mr. Elting. Mr. Story resides at 187 Arlington avenue, Brooklyn, but has a farm at Lafayetteville, Dutchess county, where he spends much of the summer.

During the time Mr. Elting served as Collector of the Port of New York, Mr. Story came to know Mr. Elting very intimately and told of numerous incidents which brought to light the plain good humor of the collector. Mr. Story, a member of the board of deacons of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, invited Mr. Elting to speak on an occasion from the pulpit of the church where Henry Ward Beecher had spoken. On this occasion Mr. Elting opened his remarks with the statement that he had "never expected to walk where Henry Ward Beecher had walked" and then proceeded to tell the congregation that he could say all he had to say in far less than the allotted time of eight minutes.

Mr. Story told of another incident during prohibition when a complaint was lodged of too much interference with business when a seizure of liquid goods had been made. Mr. Elting called Mr. Story to his office to inquire about the incident. The conversation went: "Hello Story, I understand you are a prohibitionist," and Story replied, "No, Mr. Collector, who ever told you that was wrong. I am a teetotaler," and with a smile the collector dismissed the matter. This broadminded characteristic was typical of his treatment to employees of the office and Mr. Story said every employee of the department "loved" Philip Elting for his deeds.

During his connection with the customs office Mr. Story had an opportunity to meet many great people and among them was Mme. Schumann-Heink, the contralto, whom he served on occasions when she came into the country and whom he personally brought to Plymouth church for a gratis concert as well as Mildred Dilling, famous harpist. The bringing to Plymouth church of Philip Elting as a speaker, Mr. Story considered one of his greatest achievements and lists that accomplishment along with the names of many other great people who spoke in the church.

Nuzzo Denies He Refused Statement

Tells Supreme Court He Invited Men to Call at His Office

Albany, N. Y., July 23 (P)—Samuel Nuzzo, treasurer and business agent of Newburgh Local 17, the Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union (A.F.L.), denied today in supreme court he had ever refused to give union members a financial statement.

Nuzzo said he followed union officers and defendants in an action brought by a "rank and file" committee of 17 members of the union, which includes workers on New York city water projects in Sullivan, Ulster, Orange and Greene counties. The plaintiffs seek an accounting of union funds and election of officers.

Several times when members asked for a financial statement, Nuzzo said, he did not have them, and he said he invited the members to call at his office any time and inspect union records.

Nuzzo, a Newburgh night club operator, was described in court yesterday by Frederick Dusing, one of the plaintiffs, as "boss" of the union. According to Dusing, Nuzzo has the authority to account for funds and hold elections only "when he sees fit."

U. S. Ahead In Battle Of the Bugs

Washington—There's good news from one battlefield—U. S. farmers pretty generally repulsed all bug attacks this year. Department of Agriculture field agents reported that weather conditions and prompt counterblitzes cut insect damage to a minimum this spring and summer, with every probability the damage for the year will also be cut down. Latest communiques from the battle of the bugs:

Boll Weevil On The March

DEEP SOUTH SECTOR: The boll weevil situation here is serious but not hopeless. Winter weather was ideal for maximum propagation. Dusting with poison must be increased to cope with the augmented weevil population.

Grasshopper Attacks An Apple

SOUTHWEST SECTOR: Wet weather has almost eliminated "enemy air activity." In other words grasshopper hatches were decreased by the excessive rains last spring. The flying pests probably will do less damage this year than in a decade.

Codling Moth Consolidates His Position

NORTHWEST SECTOR: "Air forces" here still active. The codling moth is the No. 1 problem in Pacific Northwest orchards, presenting an annual bill of $30,000,000 for damage and necessary control measures. Trees must be sprayed up to 11 times a year to control the pest. Arsenate of lead, sprayed on orchards, has also fouled the soil and cut down crop yields.

Beetle Blitz

EASTERN FRONT: Japanese beetles are slowly advancing their range, but scientific counterattacks are succeeding. Introduction of the Korean wasp, a natural enemy, and a newly-discovered disease together are inflicting heavy losses on the beetle population, and damage is not expected to be so heavy this year.

ator Connally (D-Tex.) as a compromise to meet some of the criticism of legislation to retain citizen soldiers in uniform beyond the present limit of one year.

Connally said he had discussed this proposal with Secretary of War Stimson, adding that if the War Department did not itself recommend changes he would offer an amendment of this nature.

He hoped to make it possible, the Texas senator told reporters, for national guardsmen and reserves with dependents or business obligations to leave the service, if they felt it was necessary to do so.

The amendment, he added, probably would have to be couched in broad language so that it would apply in all cases where it could be shown that additional service would work undue hardship. He pointed out that while it probably would cover selectees as well as Guardsmen and reserves, it would affect them little because such problems were investigated by local boards before they were inducted. The general policy of draft boards has been to defer registrants with dependents.

Some members of the House military committee, preparing to hear testimony (10 a. m.) from General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, on the proposal to extend the period of service, said they doubted whether a majority of House members were yet convinced of the need for an extension.

Up to Marshall

In their opinion, they made clear, it will be up to Marshall and other army officials to justify the need, even though President Roosevelt has declared that it would be taking "a grave national risk" to permit demobilization of the army's one-year soldiers this fall and winter.

Meanwhile, it appeared likely that the Senate military committee might approve for Senate consideration a resolution by Senator Thomas (D-Utah) calling for a congressional declaration of an emergency under which citizen soldiers could be retained in the army's ranks indefinitely.

And despite the doubts expressed by some of his fellow members Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the House military committee, forecast that Congress would finally meet the situation by adopting a resolution similar to that proposed by Senator Thomas.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, said the "trend" appeared to be in the direction of the Thomas resolution, rather than amendment of the Selective Service Act, as first proposed by the war department.

Police Hold Laundry Worker for Questioning

Lynn, Mass., July 23 (P)—A swarthy young laundry solicitor who, police said, had a sex-offense record, was taken into custody in nearby Chelsea for questioning today while mounting rewards were offered and a police search was intensified for the slayer of 19-year-old Frances M. Cochran.

The man, said by Chelsea police to have been engaged in soliciting laundry patronage in Lynn, was picked up by police as he drove an eight-year-old sedan resembling the type of automobile Miss Cochran entered last Thursday afternoon as she approached her home, en route from her work. Police have pressed a search for the driver of that car, for the pretty young woman was never reported seen again—until her mutilated and ravished body was found hidden in woods three days later in Salem woods.

Lieutenant John J. Kirby of the Chelsea police, who with Sergeant George R. Finn took the 28-year-old man into custody today, said that he had a sex-crime record. The man was removed to Lynn for questioning. The Chelsea officers said that the wheels and bumper of the man's car had received a recent coat of brilliant red paint.

Common-Sense Rules for Removal of Pits and Seeds From the Mouth When Eating at the Table

What Shall I Do With the Pits?

The removal of pits and seeds from the mouth when eating at the table is a subject almost more unpleasant to talk about than to witness. The real rule is to try to be as neat about it as you can, and to attract least attention.

The idea is unpleasant, certainly, to put pits back into the spoon from which one is eating. In fact it is revolting to see a pit that has a lot of pulp covering it so that a whole mouthful of food is seemingly put back in the spoon. And yet when the pit is very dry and dropped from compressed lips, as it is done by neat people, it can be quite all right. But the rules of safety for pits and seeds and bones are these:

Large stones, such as those of peaches and large plums should never be put in the mouth. Small pits and seeds must be eaten quite bare in the mouth and then dropped into the cupped fist and then into the plate. Grape seeds should not be blown or your plate. An accidental fish bone or quab bone or a broken bit of chicken bone is taken between the finger and thumb and removed from between compressed lips.

Introducing a Stepmother

Dear Mrs. Post: How should my stepsons introduce me to their friends? They have been calling me by my first name because they are grown and I am much younger than their father. Their own mother is living so if I were older they would hardly call me mother. And I am really too young to be called stepmother by grown boys. Once or twice, so far, they have had occasion to introduce me and they have stumbled and mumbled, not knowing what to say. I'd like to make it easier for them, but don't know what to suggest.

Answer: "May I introduce you to my father's wife?" would be the proper thing to say, or "Mrs. Brown, my father's wife," or just "Mrs. Brown," unless you would like them to say "The young person who married father!" This sort of thing goes very well once, but not when repeated.

Three Generations of William D.'s

Dear Mrs. Post: My father's name is William; my name is William, and I now have a son who is to be called William. Each of us has the same middle initial but not the same middle name. Nevertheless, I have been calling myself William D. Blank, Jr., all my life, and I don't believe that I am actually a junior. But since I have been called Junior all these years, I can't suddenly stop when my own father writes his name William D. Blank. So what shall I name our son?

Answer: Since "junior" means the same name exactly, you are—as you say—not really a junior. But so long as you were both using only a middle initial and these were identical, I can't see how else you could have distinguished yourself from your father than by adding a junior to your name. Even if your son writes his name in full instead of with a middle initial this will not always prevent confusion. Some people will certainly suppose that the "D" in your signature stands for the David in your son's name. It would be much simpler to change the initial. Otherwise there is no way to establish his identity except by calling him William D. Blank, third.

Farm Section Is Working to Meet Emergency Needs

Albany, July 23—In laboratories, fields, canning factories, broadcasting studios, offices, railroad yards, warehouses and grain elevators, New York's Department of Agriculture and Markets is doing a length and breadth of the state job in the program of national defense and aid to Britain.

While the role of New York state government in national defense is by no means confined to the Department of Agriculture and Markets, Commissioner Holton V. Noyes made known the findings of a survey of the important defense activities of the department which he heads.

By mandate of the Legislature, the Department of Agriculture and Markets interests itself in foods, feeds, seeds, milk and many related subjects in which it looks out for the consumer as well as the producer. The department's work dovetails neatly with defense needs said Commissioner Noyes.

To facilitate the movement of canned goods purchased under provisions of the lease-lend act, the department's Bureau of Markets has established a laboratory at Rochester to assist in the examination of these products. Frozen eggs, canned tomatoes, powdered dry milk purchased in New York state and destined for England, come under scrutiny of the department's inspectors and three specialists on canned goods who are now employed in the Rochester laboratory.

Cherries enroute to Canada must undergo inspection. Army purchases of hay increased the inspection work to an enormous extent. Other products of New York's farms came in for their share of going-over. All of these goods are bought on a grade basis and the Department of Agriculture and Markets must see that the grade is met.

In the case of the canned goods, inspectors take sample cans according to pre-determined methods. In the laboratory these cans are cut and their contents examined. Those contents are checked for correctness of grade according to state and federal standards. If the lot measures up to the required quality, it is certified and identified as to grade.

But government vigilance does not stop there. Substitution of an inferior grade might be made before the shipment actually starts on its overseas journey, so the inspectors guard against such tactics by what they call "check loading."

Such volume has been attained by the Department's participation in this phase of the defense program in addition to its normally far-flung inspection activities that it finds itself short of qualified inspectors. Commissioner Noyes said all senior inspectors, 22, and all junior inspectors, 26 of them, are being augmented by apprentices which the state is training on specific products. An inspector moves up the scale as he broadens his range of products which he qualifies to pass on.

Adequacy of the supply of railroad cars to move New York's agricultural products in keeping with defense needs is a task for which the department's Traffic Bureau finds itself especially fitted. Cooperating with the carriers and shippers, the Traffic Bureau has succeeded in preventing uneconomic food loss by having cars at the right places at the right times.

Britain needs dairy products. New York is expected to supply many of them. But farmers have encountered severe drought and a shortage of farm labor. The department recognizes these facts, said Commissioner Noyes, and is bending every effort in its work with the federal government to alleviate the situation. Higher milk prices are expected to compensate the dairymen who must hire farm help in a rising labor market.

Nutrition is a vital defense project, says Washington. "Make America Strong by Making Americans Stronger," was the June dairy slogan and it still holds true, so New York's Department of Agriculture and Markets is pounding away at proper diets and balanced meals. In this work it is given the cooperation of 22 radio broadcasting stations in New York state. Programs of information for consumers of food are prepared at Albany and go on the air from those stations every week. Besides, the department distributes free books of facts and suggestions for serving the right foods.

From the departmental Bureau of Statistics, operated in conjunction with the federal government, comes word that a survey of commercial grain storage facilities was made possible through the bureau's contacts. Another survey dealt with the expected production of cheese and evaporated milk vitally needed by nations abroad. This same bureau has been closely identified with the work of the New York State Agricultural Defense Committee, especially on the farm labor problem, and is associated with the sub-committee on Emergency Control of Primary Food Distribution as well as the United States Department of Agriculture Defense Committee for New York state. All of this work Commissioner Noyes pointed out, bears on the nation's food supplies, as does the work of the Bureau of Food Control.

In a less tangible contribution to national unity but probably no less important in the opinion of the department head, departmental personnel have recently voiced pleas for removal of interstate trade barriers to speed up the defense program. They have made their pleas at gatherings far removed from New York and with results which cause the commissioner to feel optimistic that the national emergency will tear down many of the walls between states. "We look for an even greater expansion of our activities on behalf of national defense," observed Mr. Noyes, "and are ready to do our best to meet the emergency situation."

As the rat headed for the back door, he passed the meat counter, and the butcher joined in the chase, cleaver in hand. At the front of the store a group of customers saw the grocer race out the back door, followed by the butcher with his cleaver. Drawing hasty conclusions, several of them overtook the pair, thrust them away from each other and disarmed the butcher. The rat escaped.

Recreations Engage Harlem Valley, Tonight at Stadium

Charlie Neff Is Listed to Pitch; Starts at 9 P. M.

Chuck Yanni Will Take Over at Third Base in Debut; Ostrom Is Back With Rees

The great Harlem Valley State Hospital club from Wingdale will come into municipal stadium tonight to face Charlie Neff and the Kingston Recreations in another mid-week attraction. Game time is scheduled for 9 o'clock.

Neff, who was batted out of the box by the Baltimore Elite Giants last week, will have another chance to reach the victory column tonight if he's in good form. However, Charlie's opponents won't offer any special spots in the batting column. The Wingdale team has won 17 games so far this season and most of its victories have been by a comfortable margin of runs. Elbert Johnson, famous spitball artist or Johnny Gilbert is expected to start on the mound for Wingdale.

In tonight's contest the Rees will present two new faces in the lineup. At third base Chuck Yanni, veteran infielder from Albany, has accepted terms, and will be at the "hot corner" in place of Andy Celuch. Don Steffins, ex-Temple University hurler, and who has gained much recognition for his hurling duties in the capital district, also will be with the locals.

The "Big Three" of Kingston's sluggers, Billy Ostrom, Jimmy Ashdown and Tommy Maines, will be back together tonight in hopes of thrashing any pitcher the Wingdale manager assigns. Ostrom leads the club with 428, Ashdown has 361 and Maines 348 for an average clip of .375. When playing along side of each other this trio has pounded the ball terrifically. And with Chuck Yanni joining the squad for tonight's battle more offensive power will be added.

The Harlem Valley team moved through the first half of the Mid-Hudson League without a defeat. It continued through the second half until Eddie Wallace of Saugerties stopped the club by a 5 to 1 trimming Sunday night.

While Kingston had to go to no ends to beat the Poughkeepsie Roe Movers, the Wingdale team breezed through the Dahmen with ease. The scores, both with Wingdale on the long end, were 15 to 9 and 23 to 1. This shows some more of the strength that tonight's visitors will pack when Charlie Neff takes the hill in quest for his second triumph of the year.

Besides the pitchers' battle which will take place if Neff and Johnson are named, another hectic struggle is anticipated between Dick Whitesell of the Harlem Valley club and Tommy Maines of the Rees about the two best sluggers in this district. Both of these outfielders are students at Syracuse University. And both are slated to be top-flight members of the varsity football squad next fall.

Although the Recreations will welcome the return of Billy Ostrom back at the initial sack, nothing can be taken away from Bing Van Etten who patrolled the bag Sunday night against the Movers. Van did an exceptionally fine job on defense and solved the Poughkeepsie hurlers for three tough hits. Bing was the player who started that 12th inning rally and the one who came across with the winning marker.

The batting averages as tabulated by the Freeman sports department:

	AB	R	H	Avg.
Ostrom	14	3	6	.428

Freemans Defeat 436 Club, 6 to 3 Rally in Sixth Frame Gives Printers Victory

The Freeman Printers rallied with four runs in the sixth inning in their game with the 436 Club last night and finally won the game by the score of 6 to 3. Lou Netter and George Reis formed the winning battery.

Up until the late inning surge the score was knotted 2-all. Then the fireworks and the ball game. The 436 Club made a threatening gesture in the seventh and pushed over a run.

Opposing the Freeman battery were Hornbeck and Graney. Clarence Uhl proved to be the fielding star as he pulled off several sensational catches which were labeled for base hits. Walt Kirchofer led the winners' attack with a single and a double.

Going Strong

JIMMY ASHDOWN

With a lot of credit going to Billy Ostrom and Tommy Maines, it's been overlooked to some degree that Jimmy Ashdown has been turning in some brilliant performances both with his stick and glove. Jimmy broke into the lineup a few weeks ago and has been a mainstay ever since. In 36 times at the plate, Ashdown has punched out 13 hits for a cool average of .361, the second best swatter on the club. Jimmy also is a great lead-off man with a good eye for walks.

Atley Donald Checks Tribe For Yanks, 4-3; Increase Lead to 8; Feller Stopped

28-Year-Old Yankee Wins Third From Cleveland; Cards Tie for First

(By The Associated Press)

Sometimes in baseball a pitcher gets the "number" of a rival ball club—and the one Atley Donald of the New York Yankees has on the Cleveland Indians has proved immensely important.

Donald is a 28-year-old southern boy who never is mentioned in the same breath with the better pitchers of the American League although in 1939 he set a major league record for rookies by winning 12 consecutive games. A sore arm stopped him and he has been a so-so pitcher ever since against everybody, that is, but the Indians.

He has won five contests this year, three of them over Cleveland. Two of the three were against Bob Feller, the league's ace hurler.

Lead by Eight

Yesterday Donald led the Yanks to a 4-3 decision that turned the pennant race into a virtual runaway, giving the Yanks their 35th victory in 41 tilts and an eighth game grip on first place.

The sturdy rightlander held the Indians to six hits. The score wouldn't have been close except for Clarence (Soup) Campbell, a Cleveland rookie, who hit a double and a home run.

Feller, trying for his 20th victory before 45,000 fans, held the Yanks to seven hits. But six of these were bunched in the first four frames and were interspersed with walks. The blows included a home run by Joe Gordon and a timely double by Charley Keller and Joe DiMaggio, who now has hit in five straight encounters since his 56-game streak was snapped.

While the Yanks were blowing the lid off the American League competition, leaders in the National League managed to tie themselves in another knot.

The Brooklyn Dodgers carried a 4-0 lead into the ninth inning and then lost a 5-4 decision to the Cincinnati Reds in a big rally centered around Chuck Aleno's pinch-triple with the bases loaded. Bucky Walters, who had held the Dodgers to eight hits, drove in the deciding run with a fly to center. It was the fifth defeat in six contests for the skidding Dodgers and when the St. Louis Cardinals downed the New York Giants, 7-6, the National League lead reverted to a tie between Brooklyn and St. Louis.

Cards Trim Giants

The Cards crowded six runs into one rollicking inning, the fourth, to beat the Giants. Enos Slaughter hit a home run, Estel Craggie singled with the bases loaded and Johnny Hopp tripled with two on.

The defeat also dropped the Giants out of third place and let in Cincinnati.

All of the games yesterday were won by the home teams, five of them by one run.

Pittsburgh beat the Phillies, 4-3, in a tilt in which both starting pitchers lasted only one inning and in which all the scoring was completed by the third.

Explains Pitch

JOHNNY NIGGELING

Another hurler of the St. Louis Browns, Johnny Niggeling, today tells of his knuckle ball tossing. Niggeling has been flinging this special pitch ever since he can remember. He recalls using the knuckle ball when playing ball on the sandlots. Niggeling tells of his pitch: "I grip the ball with the tip of my second finger pressed against the smooth surface, carefully avoiding the seams. Niggeling goes on: 'The ordinary break of the ball is downward and to the side, but it isn't always possible to say just which way the pitch is going to break. It usually acts like a curve—down and away from a right-handed batter—but frequently it breaks into the plate for a right-handed hitter like a screw-ball.'

Boston Braves, 13-2, with a 16-hit bombardment. Bill Nicholson drove in three runs with his 18th home run and a double and Dom Dileasandro batted in four with a double and two singles. By the ninth inning Manager Jim Wilson took out his pitcher, Bill Lee, just to let him rest. He had been on base four times.

The Boston Red Sox licked the Chicago White Sox, 6-2, with Heber (Dick) Newsome outpitching John Rigley for his 11th victory. Among Boston's seven hits were homers by Ted Williams, Jim Tabor and Jim Fox. Newsome allowed six hits.

The Philadelphia Athletics easily whipped the St. Louis Browns, 4-1, with Jack Knott pitching five-hit ball.

The Washington Senators stopped the Detroit Tigers, 5-4, on the steady eight-hit hurling of Sid Hudson.

Colonials Win Two

The Colonial Sweet Shop softball team, in a last inning rally, scored a one-run victory over St. Colman's of the Catholic League Monday night in East Kingston.

Barton and Bush worked for the winners. The Colonials came back strong Tuesday night to shellack the New Paltz Normal Club by 21 to 1. Israel and Bush formed the winning battery.

Ray Billows Ready To Start Defense Of State Honors

Poughkeepsie Golfer Faces Formidable Field; Tom Goodwin Entered in Tourney at Troy

Troy, N. Y., July 23 (AP)—Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie opens defense of his New York state amateur golf championship today against a formidable field including Tommy Pierce, former Vermont state titleholder, who defeated him a few weeks ago in the Lincoln Memorial tournament at Manchester, Vt.

Pierce, of Rutland, will represent the host Troy Country Club in the four-day contest. The 32 low scorers among some 125 entrants in today's medal play will start match play tomorrow, with the 36-hole final Saturday.

Only Neil White, New York former California state champion and tournament "dark horse" toured the 6,420-yard layout in par-71 in practice yesterday.

Pierce turned in a 73, while Tommy Goodwin, Briarcliff Manor, who won the state junior title over the same course 10 years ago, posted a 74.

Goodwin, a three-time amateur titleholder, shared his score with Bob Eckes, Buffalo, and Walt Schneider, Troy.

Late entrants include Mid O'Hare, Syracuse, central New York open champion who whipped Gene Sarazen two weeks ago by four strokes in the open's medal play.

Billows walloped Willie Turnesa, former national amateur king, for the 1940 title. Turnesa, now playing out of Detroit, is not entered this year.

Scout Al Egan Regards Richard Wakefield As His Best Discovery Since George Sisler

By WATSON SPOELSTRA (AP) Feature Service

Detroit — Owner Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit Tigers is more of a hard-headed business man than a gambler when he sends his greenbacks after talent such as Richard Cummings Wakefield, the $45,000 collegian.

When Briggs, the wealthy manufacturer of automobile bodies, astounded baseball with his record bonus for a college sophomore two or three years away from the majors, he was backing the judgement of his foremost ivory hunter, silver-haired Aloysius J. (Wish) Egan.

For 25 years Egan has combed the middle west for players for Detroit. He currently has nine finds in the majors.

Perhaps Egan saw in Wakefield the opportunity to erase from memory his disappointment over the signing in 1915 by the St. Louis Browns of George Sisler, Michigan pitcher and first baseman. George hit American league pitching for a 13-year mark of .341.

Egan, himself a former pitcher who never was quite good enough for the majors, spotted Sisler at Ann Arbor. He reported to Frank Navin, Tiger owner.

Branch Rickey, then manager of the Browns, came up with the Sisler contract. Egan was blameless but it was NOT pleasant to reflect that the first player he uncovered got away.

It was the Sisler incident that started Egan as a talent scout. His current crop includes Barney McCosky, Harold Newhouse, Pat Mullins and Paul Trout of Detroit, Roy Cullenbine and Chester Laabs of the Browns, Mike Tresh of the White Sox, Benny McCoy of the Athletics and Maurice Van Robays of the Pirates.

But in 25 years of watching Egan never again saw a player he could bracket with Sisler until Wakefield came along this spring. It wasn't what he did that impressed the scout but the way he did it.

"I don't take any of the credit for signing this boy," says Egan. "I liked his power and his speed. I knew the boy hadn't played much baseball and that there was room for improvement. Mr. Briggs backed me up and he should get the credit."

Should Wakefield eventually become a $45,000 "lemon," Egan says he willingly will shoulder the blame.

"Nothing is certain in baseball," Egan declares, "but I'm ready to stake my reputation on this boy's chances."

Egan is one of baseball's scores of scouts, who travel about the country combing the minor leagues and college campuses for prospects.

Scouts sometimes trail a player for weeks. They judge not only his ability, but his temperament, courage, outside activities and habits.

Scouts take gambles. Some turned thumbs down on Joe DiMaggio because he was injured while a Pacific Coast league player. The Yankee scout was willing to take a chance and came up with baseball's greatest all-round star.

McNeill and Parker Make Tennis Experts Look Good

Both Court Stars Hold Up Statements; McNeill Loses Four; Parker Ekes Out Victory

Seabright, N. J., July 23 (AP)—The tennis experts were building themselves up today as pretty smart fellows, and on the record you couldn't very well blame them.

These are the gents, you may recall, who were skeptical on two counts when the 54th annual Seabright tournament started. They had their doubts that National Champion Don McNeill should be ignored completely merely because he hadn't been able to win any clay court tournament. They also were not inclined to wax overenthusiastic about Frankie Parker in spite of his impressive record in the same league.

The experts looked good both ways off yesterday's matches, for McNeill turned in a fine exhibition in his first turf test of the season, and Parker came close to flunking his.

While blond Donald was rushing aside Bob Kerdasha of South Carolina with the loss of only four games, Parker had to call on all his court craft to get by Ed Amark of San Francisco, a comparative "rookie," 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.

Until the Californian tied in the final set, he had the clay court champion in a bad way.

McNeill, who goes up against southpaw Seymour Greenberg of Chicago today, was elated over his performance. "It feels good to get back on that stuff," he said. "Now I can begin to control my shots."

Outwardly at least Parker showed little concern. "There's quite a difference playing on grass," he acknowledged, "but Amark played good tennis. He would have given anybody a battle."

Frankie appeared to be in for another potential test today in his match with Sidney Wood.

Only major casualty yesterday was Virginia Wolfenden, seeded fourth in the women's division. The San Francisco girl was upset in a bitter three-set match by Mrs. Millicent Hirsch Lang of New York, who thus joined the three seeded survivors—Mrs. Sarah Falfrey Cooke, Helen Jacobs and Dot Bundy—and four others in the quarter-finals.

Lippy Leo Won't Predict Anything for Brooklyn; Sure Club Will Not Fold Up in Race

Cincinnati, July 23 (AP)—If you think Leo Durocher subscribes to the propaganda that his Dodgers can't do it, just ask Leo Durocher. Leo is not saying they will, but he is saying that the prayers of the 2,000,000-odd denizens of that happy Borough of Brooklyn are being heard and will be answered if there's anything in baseball players from the heart out.

"I'm not predicting anything and I never do," he said, "but we're in there playing all the time and we're all right. That game was one of those things and it was just another ball game. We played a good game and we're going to keep on playing good games."

About 90 percent of the feature films shown in New Zealand are American, the Department of Commerce reports.

Shorts-Clad Women 'Tell' Police in Redlands

Redlands, Calif., July 23 (AP)—Shorts-clad women trod Redlands' hot sidewalks as usual. Policemen turned their heads.

Embarrassed? Not a bit of it. Police Commissioner Theodore Krumm ordered the arrest of all women wearing "indecent summer clothing. . . especially shorts."

Not an arrest was made yesterday.

Police Chief William Morrison declined comment.

The desk sergeant couldn't. But what he said is a secret shared only by Mrs. Gay Johnson, president of the Art League.

Wearing shorts, she walked right into the police station and told the sergeant what she thought of Krumm's edict. . . and with the temperature 104, too!

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Camp Reaches Capacity

Tuesday morning the scouts at Camp Half Moon, the Boy Scout Camp at Spruett, were preparing to be hosts to the official board. The board held its monthly meeting at the camp and each man pronounced the new site and the general camping set-up highly satisfactory.

Monday and Tuesday the boys were busy working on scoutcraft and similar scout and camping activities. The emphasis seems to be on life saving, first aid, farm merit badges and camping. The scouts are pointing once more for the second and last camp court of honor to be held Saturday evening, August 2.

The camp is running at capacity this week with 74 scouts in attendance. So many boys have registered and then have decided to stay over, that this camp season will undoubtedly be the largest in the history of the camp.

The scouts are now interested in Boy's Day which will be held Friday of this week. Cheers, songs, yells, placards mark the occasion. The two parties are highly spirited and seem to be sure of the defeat of the other.

Wednesday morning, the campers will be divided into two groups which will leave camp for overnight hikes. The veterans will go to Diamond Notch, over Lanesville mountain, up to Devil's Tombstone where they will camp. In the morning this group will climb Hunter mountain and will be met by a group of new campers, who will have climbed Hunter mountain and camped at the observatory. The two groups will then return to camp.

While the camp is at capacity this week, there will be room for ten boys beginning Sunday, July 27. Any boy who wishes to attend camp should contact R. Gardner Burns, scout executive, 277 Fair street, Kingston, or Howard Mosher, camp director, Spruett.

Man Confesses He Slew John Ballo at Tucker's Corners

and got his gun and shot Ballo and then left for California.

After the shooting on November 10, 1922, Tripano, who was born in Italy, went to California, changed his name and sought work as a machinist's helper.

In his talk to the California police he denied the shooting and then said he could not recall the name of the man whom he had shot but stated it was a neighbor. He has worked in railroad shops since he resided in California.

In December 1922 the case was submitted to the grand jury and a sealed indictment charging murder, second degree, was returned on December 20, 1922. A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Tripano but he was never located.

Sheriff Molyneux received word this morning that Tripano had waived extradition and said that officers would bring Tripano back to Ulster county to stand trial.

Police of Mendoza, Argentina, were compelled to use tear gas to disperse a crowd that stoned the Italian Club after demanding that it haul down its Italian flags.

In broad terms, authorities said, the objectives stated by Welles resembled some of the famous "14 points" of President Wilson which were considered a primary factor in setting off a great wave of peace sentiment among the German people in the last war.

Industrial activity in Chile has progressively expanded since the war started, according to the Department of Commerce.

City Board Drops Rabies Proposal

board of health might enact a regulation requiring compulsory inoculation of all dogs against rabies and that the state health department would not lodge any objections against such a regulation.

"It is realized, of course, that the legality of such regulation could be determined only by a court of proper jurisdiction. It would appear highly probable that in view of the circumstances that such action by the board of health would be upheld.

"Dr. Perkins stressed the fact that inoculated dogs are not released from quarantine restrictions and that any dog bitten by or in contact with a rabid dog must be destroyed or placed in a veterinary hospital for six months regardless of whether or not it has at any time been inoculated against rabies. Also that the measure should not be recognized as a substitute for enforcement of quarantine regulations.

"At the present time, it is believed that inoculation of dogs against rabies is not sufficiently effective so that it can be wholeheartedly recommended and there is no present intent of the State Department of Health to require state-wide vaccination.

"If, however, recent improvements in rabies vaccine prove as substantial as some of the reports would lead one to believe, it is possible that the State Health Department may reverse its attitude at some future date."

No Rabies Tests Here

The board at the last meeting decided to take up the matter of having heads of rabid dogs examined at the city laboratory instead of sending the heads to the state laboratory in Albany.

In reply to questions of the board Dr. Sanford said he had sent a communication to Dr. Taylor, in charge of the city laboratory, but as Dr. Taylor was away at the present time no answer had been received.

Dr. Philip Foley, veterinarian of the local board, said that he had talked the matter over with the local laboratory and from information he had received the state health department did not favor setting up such equipment here, as it would require the services of additional help, and also the work would have to be done in another building.

After some further discussion of the matter the board decided to drop the plan and to continue sending heads if rabid dogs to the state laboratory for testing.

Dr. Sanford reported the following communicable diseases in Kingston during the month of June:

Chickenpox	12
German Measles	3
Measles	2
Pneumonia	6
Scarlet Fever	20
Whooping Cough	12

Legion 40 and 8 Opens 'V' Drive At Local Session

Drums last night rolled out "three dots and a dash", international Morse characters for the letter "V" as members of the "40 and 8", honor organization Voiture 381 of Ulster county stood at attention in the Legion building holding up the second and third fingers of the right hand spread apart in the form of the letter "V", Britain's newly launched slogan of "V" for Victory by Britain and her allies over Hitlerism.

It was pointed out that this slogan is taking the United States in a big way and it is making America as conscious of the British psychological campaign as it does all over Europe.

The new "V" for Victory song as broadcast by Britain and sung generally today to the music of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony was dramatically given to the assembly by one of the "40 and 8" members.

At the regular annual convention held by this organization last night after all the outstanding committees had given various reports of their activities, election of new officers took place with the following results:

Daniel W. Benton was elected as Chief de Gare; Chef de Train Justin Bell; Correspondent, Michael Bruno; Conductor, John Ludlow; Com. Intendant, Samuel C. Bowden; Garde de la Porte, Abe Singer; Com. Voyageur, John Janak; Lampiste, Daniel F. Ennis; Aumonier, Edward J. Hillis; Medecine, Dr. Mortimer Downer; Publicist, Jack Rabin; Chemineux, Harry L. Kirchner; Eugene P. MacConnell and Jesse H. Alexander; Advocate, John B. Sterly; Delegate to the National Convention of the "40 and 8", Gus S. Paulson; Alternate Delegate, Jesse H. Alexander; Delegate to the State Convention, Harry L. Kirchner and Samuel Bowden with Justin Bell and Daniel W. Benton as alternates.

Prominent guests of the evening were: Grand Chemist Ray Lyons of Albany and Chef de Gare of Albany County Voiture 348, Henry Sherman.

After the close of the convention which was held at the Legion Memorial Building, 18 West O'Reilly street, the members gathered at the Seagrill restaurant for a specially arranged supper and entertainment with Voyageur Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman as toastmaster.
